Opinion of the Court. ing, and the plaintiff was entitled to have the whole evidence passed upon by the jury. In the recent case of B. 6 O. R. R. Co. v. Keedy and Snyder, 75 Md. 324, we said: The evidence may not have been of such a character as to convince all minds that there was culpable negligence on the part of the appellants agents, but if there was any evidence from which a jury might honestly reach a conclusion, then there was no error in allowing the jury to consider it. There was evidence tending to show that the bell was not rung, and that the plaintiff was not struck by the car, as testified...
