If your parents thought it didn't matter, how could I interfere? You might have warned me! Instead of that, you actually congratulated me! How could you? It's all very well for Papa and Mama to think that money is the only thing, but surely everybody can't think so! At least I ought to have had my choice! I ought to have been told that he was rich, but that--Oh, well, I don't want to talk of these things now. It's all over and settled and done with, isn't it? And there's nothing to do but to make the best of it. Jack was flushed, excited, angry, undecided how much to say. Your father will have to see him and speak to him, he said at last. I laughed. Papa! Why, it was he who first told me what a splendid marriage I was to make! Well, somebody must speak to him. But I had by this time had plenty of time to think things over, and I came to the conclusion that we were both straining at a gnat after all. Look here, Jack, I said, I want you to forget all about this, and not to speak about it to any one. It is not Sir Lionel's fault that this woman has stolen my things, and I know he was frightfully annoyed when he found it out. But he thinks it...
