It is clear that the cost of production during these times should be dependent upon--(1) The fuel cost per unit. (2) The oil, water, waste, and stores. (3) The depreciation and repairs. All other charges--such as salaries, management, fitters wages, and running staff--ought to be left out of this cost, because the salaries woidd have to be paid whether the machinery was running loaded or not. Some time ago I made careful tests over a considerable period to discover the amount of coal used per unit for additional load. Deducting the lighting-up fuel, and all fuel which would have to be used whether the works were sending out energy or not, that is to say, the fuel used to keep the steam pipes warm, to keep the pumps running, and all radiation losses, I was surprised to find the following: --The amount of coal...
